Dear Frank,

As you are aware the Institute for a Broadband Society (IBES) is a cross-disciplinary research institute dedicated to products, services, and innovations that maximise the benefit of new broadband technologies to Australian society. The Institute's activities cover a wide range of fields including content creation and delivery, delivery of remote health services and education, social networking, entertainment and broadband technology.

At IBES, we warmly support the Global Learning Village Foundation and its aim to roll out the unique model for establishing smarter, healthier and better-connected communities for the 21st Century.

Given the transformative and enabling aspects of broadband, we feel our research interests are aligned with the practical results that have already been demonstrated through the Global Learning Village Model in Broadmeadows.

We look forward to continuing to explore possible areas of collaboration between our organisations.

Kind regards,

Kate Cornick
Executive Director
